Help:Breakdown

If you want to check and sign the parameter breakdown in editorial process template, you have to look at the article and assess:

1. Length of the article. → If the article is too long, should be probably merged. If you think so, insert in discussion page of the article the template {{Merge}}. If the article seems to be too short and does not contain complete information, should be marked as {{Stub}}. If the article contains complete information, but is still to short (and probably will ever be too short), would be better to create an {{Dictionary}} from it.
2. Have headings correct level?
   🔍 For more information see Help:Headings.
3. Is the breakdown of the text correct? → If it is not, you should to make the article more clearer.

If you have checked all these things, you can sign the parameter breakdown in editorial process template by your editorial signature 🖊:

```
{{Editorial process
|breakdown = Wikiholic, 7. 7. 2011
}}
```

If you checked the parameter breakdown, you should check the parameter headings too!
