

Ladd's syndrome

Ladd's syndrome is described as a combination of a congenital volvulus of most of the loops of the small intestine (middle sections) and compression of the duodenum with an unrotated cecum, around which even distal loops can rotate.

Sources

Related Articles

- Sudden abdominal events in children
- Duodenal obstruction

Bibliography

- ZEMAN, Miroslav a Zdeněk KRŠKA. Speciální chirurgie. 3. vydání. Praha : Galén, c2014. s. 236. ISBN 978-80-7492-128-5.