

Vitiligo

Vitiligo manifests itself postnatally in the form of patchy depigmentation of the skin. The spots are sharply demarcated , the hair growing out of them is white. The pathogenesis is unclear, it is an acquired disease, but in a certain percentage it may be genetically determined. It is probably an autoimmune blockade of melanocytes , whose melanosomes are not altered but contain little pigment.

Summary Video

<mediaplayer width='450' height='250' ><https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pXeds1iMdw></mediaplayer>

Links

Related Articles

- Leukoderma
- Albinism
- Pigment

External Links

- Vitiligo

References

- BEDNÁŘ, Blahoslav and Pavel MÍŘEJOVSKÝ. General Pathology. 1st edition. Prague: Karolinum, 1994. ISBN 8070669500

Vitiligo